Electrodiagnostic assessment, consisting of electromyography, (EMG), nerve conduction study, (NCS), and related measures, may be considered MEDICALLY NECESSARY as an adjunct to history, physical exam (PE), and imaging studies when the following criteria are met:

- Signs and symptoms of peripheral neuropathy and/or myopathy are present; AND
- Definitive diagnosis cannot be made by PE and imaging studies alone; AND
- Work-up for 1 or more of the following categories* of disease is indicated:
 - Compressive neuropathies
 - Nerve root compression
 - Traumatic nerve injuries
 - Generalized and focal neuropathies/myopathies
 - Plexopathies
 - Motor neuron diseases
 - Neuromuscular junction disorders
- Compressive neuropathies
 - Carpal tunnel syndrome
 - Ulnar nerve entrapment
 - Thoracic outlet syndrome
 - Tarsal tunnel syndrome

- Other peripheral nerve entrapments
- Nerve root compression (when PE and magnetic resonance imaging [MRI] are inconclusive)
 - o Cervical nerve root compression
 - Thoracic nerve root compression
 - Lumbosacral nerve root compression
- Traumatic nerve injuries
- Generalized and focal polyneuropathies
 - Diabetic neuropathy
 - Uremic neuropathy
 - Alcohol-related neuropathy
 - Hereditary neuropathies
- Charcot-Marie Tooth
- Other hereditary neuropathies
 - Demyelinating polyneuropathies
- Guillain-Barré syndrome (acute)
- Chronic idiopathic demyelinating polyneuropathy
- Generalized myopathies
 - Polymyositis
 - Dermatomyositis
 - Muscular dystrophies
- Plexopathies
 - Cervical plexopathy
 - Brachial plexopathy
 - Lumbosacral plexopathy
- Motor neuron diseases
 - Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis
 - Progressive muscular atrophy
 - Progressive bulbar palsy
 - Pseudobulbar palsy
 - o Primary lateral sclerosis
- Neuromuscular junction disorders
 - Myasthenia gravis
 - Myasthenic syndrome
 - Lambert-Eaton syndrome.

*The above list gives specific diagnoses, according to categories of testing listed in the policy statement, for which EMG/NCS generally provides useful information in confirming or excluding the diagnosis, above that provided by clinical examination and imaging. It includes the most common diagnoses for testing, but it is not exhaustive. There may also be other less common disorders for which EMG/NCS provides useful diagnostic information.

A repeat electrodiagnostic assessment may be considered MEDICALLY NECESSARY when at least 1 of the following criteria have been met:

- Development of new symptoms or signs suggesting a second diagnosis in a patient who has received an initial diagnosis; OR
- Interim progression of disease following an initial test that was inconclusive, such that a repeat test is likely to elicit additional findings; OR
- Unexpected change(s) in the course of disease or response to treatment, suggesting that the initial diagnosis may be incorrect and that reexamination is indicated.

Electrodiagnostic assessment, consisting of EMG, NCS, and related measures, is INVESTIGATIONAL when the above criteria are not met, including but not limited to, the following situations:

- Screening of asymptomatic individuals
- Serial assessments to evaluate progression of disease in a patients with a previously diagnosed neuropathy or myopathy

- Evaluation of treatment response in a patient with previously diagnosed neuropathy or myopathy
- Evaluation of severity of disease in a patient with previously diagnosed neuropathy or myopathy.

Description

Electrodiagnostic Assessment

Electromyography (EMG) and nerve conduction study (NCS) are used as adjuncts to clinical evaluation of myopathy and peripheral neuropathy. These tests intend to evaluate the integrity and electrical function of muscles and peripheral nerves. They are performed when there is clinical suspicion for a myopathic or neuropathic process and when clinical examination and standard laboratory testing cannot make a definitive diagnosis.

Test results do not generally provide a specific diagnosis. Rather, they provide additional information that assists physicians in characterizing a clinical syndrome. EMG/NCS may be useful when there is no clear etiology when symptoms are severe or rapidly progressing, or when symptoms are atypical (eg, asymmetrical, acute onset, or appearing to be autonomic).

According to the American Association of Neuromuscular & Electrodiagnostic Medicine (1999), electrodiagnostic assessment has the following goals.²

- 1. "Identify normal and abnormal nerve, muscle, motor or sensory neuron, and NMJ [neuromuscular junction] functioning.
- 2. Localize region(s) of abnormal function.
- 3. Define the type of abnormal function.
- 4. Determine the distribution of abnormalities.

- 5. Determine the severity of abnormalities.
- 6. Estimate the date of a specific nerve injury.
- 7. Estimate the duration of the disease.
- 8. Determine the progression of abnormalities or recovery from abnormal function.
- 9. Aid in diagnosis and prognosis of the disease.
- 10. Aid in selecting treatment options.
- 11. Aid in following response to treatment by providing objective evidence of change in NM [neuromuscular] function.
- 12. Localize correct locations for injections of intramuscular agents...."

 Components of the electrodiagnostic exam may include needle EMG, NCS, repetitive nerve stimulation study, somatosensory evoked potentials, and blink reflexes.

Electromyography

Needle Electromyography

An EMG needle electrode is inserted into selected muscles, chosen by the examining physician depending on the differential diagnosis and other information available during the exam. ^{2,}The response of the muscle to electrical stimulation is recorded. Three components are evaluated: observation at rest, action potential with minimal voluntary contraction, and action potential with maximum contraction.^{3,}

Single Fiber Electromyography

In single fiber EMG, a needle electrode records the response of a single muscle fiber. This test can evaluate "jitter," which is defined as the variability in the time between activation of the nerve and generation of the muscle action potential. Single fiber EMG can also measure fiber density, which is defined as the mean number of muscle fibers for one motor unit.

Nerve Conduction Study

In NCS, both motor and sensory nerve conduction are assessed. For motor conduction, electrical stimuli are delivered along various points on the nerve, and the electrical response is recorded from the appropriate muscle. For sensory conduction, electrical stimuli are delivered to 1 point on the nerve and the response recorded at a distal point on the nerve. Parameters recorded include velocity, amplitude, latency, and configuration.^{2,}

Late Wave Responses

Late waves are a complement to the basic NCS and evaluate the functioning of the proximal segment of peripheral nerves, such as the nerve root and the anterior horn cells. There are 2 types of late responses: The H-reflex and the F wave.

The H-reflex is elicited by stimulating the posterior tibial nerve and measuring the response in the gastrocnemius muscle. It is analogous to the ankle reflex and can be prolonged by radiculopathy at S1 or by peripheral neuropathy.^{3,}

The F wave is assessed by supramaximal stimulation of the distal nerve and can help estimate the conduction velocity in the proximal portion of the nerve.^{3,} This will provide information on the presence of proximal nerve abnormalities, such as radiculopathy or plexopathy.

Repetitive Nerve Stimulation

Repetitive nerve stimulation studies evaluate the integrity and function of the neuromuscular junction. The test involves stimulating a nerve repetitively at variable rates and recording the response of the corresponding muscle(s).³, Disorders of the neuromuscular junction will show a diminished muscular response to repetitive stimulation.

Somatosensory Evoked Potentials

Somatosensory evoked potentials evaluate nerve conduction in various sensory fibers of both the peripheral and central nervous system and test the integrity and function of these nerve pathways.², They are typically used to assess nerve conduction in the spinal cord and other central pathways that cannot be assessed by standard NCS.

Blink Reflexes

The blink reflexes, which are analogs of the corneal reflex, are evaluated by stimulating the orbicularis oculi muscle at the lower eyelid. They are used to localize lesions in the fifth or seventh cranial nerves.²,

Differential Diagnosis

The specific components of an individual test are not standardized. Rather, a differential diagnosis is developed by the treating physician, and/or the clinician performing the test, and the specific components of the exam are determined by the disorders being considered in the differential. Also, the differential diagnosis may be modified during the exam to reflect initial findings, and this may also influence the specific components included in the final analysis.²

Summary

Description

Electromyography (EMG) and nerve conduction studies (NCS), also collectively known as an electrodiagnostic assessment, evaluate the electrical functioning of muscles and peripheral nerves. These tests are diagnostic aids for the evaluation of myopathy and peripheral neuropathy by identifying, localizing, and characterizing electrical abnormalities in the skeletal muscles and peripheral nerves.

Summary of Evidence

For individuals with suspected peripheral neuropathy or myopathy who receive electrodiagnostic assessment including EMG and NCS, the evidence includes small observational studies on a few diagnoses, such as carpal tunnel syndrome, radiculopathy, and myopathy. Relevant outcomes are test accuracy, symptoms, functional outcomes, and quality of life. Because electrodiagnostic assessment is considered the criterion standard for evaluating the electrical function of peripheral nerves and muscles, there is no true alternative reference standard against which the sensitivity and specificity of particular EMG/NCS abnormalities for particular clinical disorders can be calculated. Different studies have used different reference standards, such as EMG/NCS measures of healthy individuals or clinical examination results. In general, these tests are considered more specific than sensitive, and normal results do not rule out the disease. The limited evidence has shown a wide range of sensitivities, which are often less than 50%. The specificity is expected to be considerably higher, but the data are insufficient to provide precise estimates of either sensitivity or specificity. The evidence is insufficient to determine the effects of the technology on health outcomes.

CPT Codes / HCPCS Codes / ICD Codes

Inclusion or exclusion of a code does not constitute or imply member coverage or provider reimbursement. Please refer to the member's contract benefits in effect at the time of service to determine coverage or non-coverage as it applies to an individual member. A draft of future ICD-10 Coding related to this document, as it might look today, is included below for your reference.

Providers should report all services using the most up-to-date industry-standard procedure, revenue, and diagnosis codes, including modifiers where applicable.

The following codes are included below for informational purposes only; this is not an all-inclusive list.
